Telephone Assistance for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing

Question: I've heard special telephones are available from the state for seniors who have trouble hearing. Is that true?

Answer: The state does offer programs that can help individuals who are hard of hearing communicate more easily via telephone. State citizens of all ages can qualify, but many people who have hearing loss related to aging could benefit from these programs.

The South Carolina School for the Deaf and Blind and the State Office of Regulatory Staff administer the South Carolina Telecommunications Equipment Distribution Program (TEDP). This program provides telecommunications equipment free of charge to South Carolina residents with qualifying disabilities. According to the information on the TEDP Web page "<http://www.scsdb.k12.sc.us/outreach/TEDP.htm>" www.scsdb.k12.sc.us/outreach/TEDP.htm, help is readily available to South Carolina residents who need this assistance.

Individuals who are experiencing difficulty using their current telephone equipment are encouraged to apply to receive assistive equipment through the South Carolina Telecommunications Equipment Distribution Program (SC TEDP). This program provides telecommunications equipment at no cost to South Carolina residents with qualifying hearing, speech, blind/low vision with hearing loss, or dual sensory disabilities. The program provides a wide range of equipment. Some examples of the equipment include amplified telephones, TTYs (teletype phones), artificial larynx and alerting devices. Training and equipment installation is provided at no charge. State residents who have phone service in their home and a certified disability that causes difficulty using a standard telephone can qualify for the program. A professional must certify that the individual can benefit from special telephone equipment.
